

FROM RUSSIA WITH LOVE.

Not to be confused with a famous Greek dessert, the word “Balaclava” comes from a town in the Ukraine of the same name. That’s where British troops first used this innovative cold weather coverage to defeat the Rusksies in the Crimean War. But enough history, because in those days balaclavas were made of wool and probably itched more than Travis Bickle’s trigger finger. Our stretchy soft version is an oasis of fleecy comfort and supersonic warmth. Not to mention, lighter, wind-proof-ier and scientifically proven to wick away perspiration. Plus, they’re adaptable; morphing to the cranial coverage of your choice faster than you can scream “Raid on Entebbe!” History’s lesson is simple here: those who attack winter face first and use our N-Ferno® balaclavas, live to fight another day. Those who don’t better get used to wiener-water Borscht.
